

Yano had a bad case
of the “yuckies.”

Toddlers don’t understand words like “cancer.”

But we made the “yuckies” go away.

Now he’s growing up big and strong.

Because he’s still got big things to do.

Yano
Neuroblastoma Survivor
Lake Zurich, IL

See more of Yano’s story at uchospitals.edu/yanostory

Cancer is a hard word to say.

Especially when it happens to a child.

But there are more happy endings
every day.

I’ll never quit working to find new treatments that save lives.

Because I’ve still got
big things to do.

Susan Cohn, MD
Director, Clinical Research,
Section of Pediatric Hematology/Oncology

We’re ready for the greatest challenges.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO
MEDICINE

Comer Children’s Hospital

AT THE FOREFRONT OF KIDS’ MEDICINE®

Find out more at 1-888-824-0200
or uchicagokidshospital.org

